A LONG EXPECTED LEGAL OPINION.

MR. BEERMAN SAYS THE AQUEDUCT CONTRAC-TORS HAVE RECEIVED 6788,389 75 IMPROPERLY.

The long-promised opinion of Corporation Counsel Seckman, on the question of what is due to the Aqueduct contractors were sent to the commissioners Beekman advises them $738,389 75 has been allowed to the contractors improperly for extra excavation outside the line of AAA. This is the aggregate of $585,498 85 paid on the recommendation of Chief Engineer Church will be prosecuted by the Government. Otto for extra excavation prior to May 23, 1887, and $152.890 90 since that date. Mr. Beekman answers the five questions propounded in the report of the Committee of Finance and Audit adopted by the Board on August 29.

He says that the outer line of excavation for which the contractors can claim pay from the city, under the contract, was to be fixed as the work advanced, and should not be determined and applied to a section or sections completed. The contractors, he says, must build mason; beyond the line adopted, as far as the Chief Engineer directs, but the mere fact that the masonry was built beyond such line did not give them a right to be paid for extra excavation. The allowances made for such extra work before May 23, 1887, were therefore illegal, and must be recovered by the city. These sums may be deducted by the Controller from the money which the city has withheld from the contractors since April last, or it may be deducted in detail from the monthly estimates hereafter presented. If such deduction ould embarrass the contractors and delay the work the repayment may be left for the final settlement. Regarding the Chief Engineer's authority to fix the line of excavation and allow the payment of extra excavation since May 23, 1887, amounting to $152,890 90, he says that the Chief Engineer did not fix such a line, and that the right of payment was assumed from Mr. Church's former action regarding extra excavation. The city, Mr. Beekman says, can recover this money paid under an improper as-After reading Mr. Beekman's opinion Contractor John

O'Brien said with a laugh: "That's all nonsense It will be all right after the election."

Chief Engineer Church said yesterday that it would be found that Mr. Deckman is in error as to his conclusions regarding the Chief Engineer's powers under the law and the Aqueduct contracts. "This," said Mr. Church, "is not a question of law, but a question of engineering. Mr. Beekman in this orinion runs counte to the written opinions on the subject of his two im mediate predecessors in the Corporation Counsel's office, Judge Lacombe and Judge O'Brien. Not only that, but he takes a view exactly contrary to that given by three of the ablest contract lawyers in the City of New

Mr. Church added that a statement published in The Tribune, on October 14, in relation to the award made by the Commissioners of land appraised for the new Aqueduct in the case of the New-York and New England Railroad, did him great injustice, saying The estimates which I sent in first were made by order of the Aqueduct Commissioners and were base on the supposition that the road-bed should be broad four tracks, with a very large culvert and very thick stone ballasting, which were the demands of the railroad company. I had the survey made on which the estimates were calculated on that basis. These footed up about $110,000 as stated.

"The private agreement for an arrangement be-tween the ratiroad directors and the Aqueduct Commissioners (which preceded the estimates referred to) was never carried out. I understood that the Corporation Counsel (Judge Lacombe) disapproved any private agreement. Afterward, an enabling act was passed by the Legislature to appoint Commissioners of Appraisal. Then I was asked to have another estimate made for a single track roadbed, with far more reasonable and less expensive methods of construction. I then ordered the surveys and estimates made on that basis, which reduced the amount to about $62,500. I understand that the allowance made by the Commissioners of Appraisal to the rail-road company is $75,000, or $12,500 more than my estimate for the same work. I never had anything to do with any negotiations for the commission in regard to the settlements whatever." missioners (which preceded the estimates referred to

SUING FOR THE LOTTIMER BONDS.

After hearing argument on a demurrer to the con plaint in the suit of L. B. Newcombe & Co. against the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad Company and John Bloodgood and William A. Lottimer, in dividually and as executors of the estate of William Lottimer, Justice Andrews, in the Supreme Court, Special Term, yesterday, reserved his decision. Be fore Jerome B. Hill, the defaulting co-executor of the estate, absconded, he pledged $50,000 worth of coupon bonds of the Chicago and Northwestern Company with the plaintiff as security for a loan. The railroad company refused to pay the coupons to the plaintiffs, having been served with notice of the elaim of the remaining executors.

Thereupon Newcombe & Co., sued the company and the executors, demanding that the company be re the executors, demanding that the company be required to issue registered bonds; that the coupons be paid; that the coupons be paid; that the court pass upon the title to the bonds; that Lottimer and Bloodgood be adjudged to have no interest in the bonds; and that damages against them individually for collusion be awarded. The defendants demurrer was based on the ground that Hill was not made a party, and that the causes of action were improperly united. William Allen Butler appeared for the plaintiffs in the argument. Austra G. Fox for the railroad company, and Giraud F. Thomson for the executors.

Fearing that he would be detected, he fied to Canada. When he was safe across the border, he sent the pawn-tickets for the diamonds back to the firm. An attempt was made by Stern & Stera to recover the without paying the advances which had been made by the pawnbrokers, on the ground that

AN EXHIBITION IN NOVEMBER WHICH PROM-ISES MANY ATTRACTIONS.

W. F. Wharton and Colonel J. T. Yesterday was the closing day for entries in every class, except the cavalry, and there was a great rush of intending exhibitors.

In the various classes of thoroughbreds, hunters and trotters, plenty of well-known horses will be found. Among the trotters are the celebrated stalli Sam Cossac, Starlight, Mambrino King and Epaulette, each of these stallions being accompanied by four of its get. J. B. Houston's famous Spoilord occuples a prominent place in this department, and the same owner's filly Sulsan, by Electioneer-Sphinz, who is reported to be a gem of the highest class, will probably dwarf all opposition in the four-year-old division. Clara is another four-year-old trotter that will do credit to her exhibitor.

Sands, Jr., are much in evidence, while in coaching stallions, H. E. Wilson's Drape d'Or, who last year took first prize in this class, again defies comers. Cab horses always excite all good deal of humorous comment and speculation, and for this competition there are half a dozen entered. In polo ponies, W. T. Hitchcock, jr., H. Lloyd Herbert and August Belmont are well represented, while among saddle horses, Courtlandt R. Moss's Caprice s expected to more than hold its own. The following will appear as exhibitors: Mrs. John Wallace, Mrs. lilehard King, Jr., Mrs. James M. Waterbury, Mrs. Archibald Alexander, Miss Eloise Stevenson, Mrs. R. The difference between the two is that the Christian Alliance attends to the curing by faith of Christians, while the other endeavors to give the heathen the same opportunities as their more enlightened brothers and sisters.
